

The Righteous Brothers' Bill Medley
Saturday March 31st, 2012
7:30 PM

Bill Medley is a seminal figure in the history of American music. Perhaps best known as half of the unmistakable duo, The Righteous Brothers, their partnership lasted four decades and became a fixture on Top Forty radio with hits like You've Lost That Lovin' Feelin', Just Once in My Life, and Unchained Melody. In 1987, Medley scored a monumental hit with another duetist, Jennifer Warrens, on (I've Had) the Time of My Life, for the film, Dirty Dancing. On March 10, 2003, The Righteous Brothers were inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. The induction came just months before Bobby Hatfield's unexpected death. This year, for the first time since Hatfield's passing, Bill Medley has gone back to the studio to record an album and shows no signs of slowing down anytime soon, keeping to a rigorous tour schedule so he may share his love of music with his loyal fans.
